

"Planetarium is an amazing game, and I've really enjoyed playing it every time that I have had the opportunity to do so. This is an excellent game for families and friends alike. It's the kind of game that uber gamers and casual gamers can both really sink their teeth into. I give this game a major thumbs up!"

In the cosmic stardust of an infant solar system...

Planetarium is designed for growing families, science-lovers, and hobby gamers. Simple rules combine with interesting and challenging game play. The thematic elements of the game have been developed with an eye on the science, led by a scientist working on NASA's search for life on Mars, and are complemented with stunning and original artworks.

"In its entirety, Planetarium is an achievement... here you're the author, director, and composer of something greater than your own existence."

-Geek & Sundry

In Planetarium a new and unique solar system will be forged from the swirling mass of matter that orbits its star. Players will take part in this creation, moving tokens to simulate gravity and the accretion of matter, crashing it onto planets that have begun to form.

Cards will be played that evolve each planet in significant and varied ways; from scorching one into a barren waste to transforming another into a potential nursery for life. Planets also migrate in their orbits, and each game ends with a completely unique system.

PLANETARIUM

PRIMORDIAL

The future is bright... And hot... and cold...

Primordial adds exciting new astronomical phenomena to your games of Planetarium. Choose to add up to two new modules to the game: Epochs and Frost Line. Epochs extends the play time of Planetarium by starting with a solar system in its infancy and includes the Late Heavy Bombardment for a more epic experience. Frost Line adds four pieces to the board that make up the frost line. This module allows High and Low Evolution cards to be played within or beyond the frost line to accrue Heat or Cold tokens. Heat and Cold tokens earn extra points but can be melted or cooled off cards when planets move around the solar system.

Not a standalone game, Requires the Planetarium base game to play.
